Guest houses are privately owned homesteads that rent out rooms for a daily rate. The owners often live on the premises and are happy to advise on the amenities and transport available in their local area. Breakfast is normally included in the price, but make sure to always check directly with the individual establishment first. Similarly, bed and breakfasts (B&B's) are small lodging providers that offer overnight accommodation and breakfast.

Always make sure to be vigilant and not disclose your personal information or financial details to strangers unless you have confirmed their identity.

Student homestay and house share providers operate across London to match individuals directly or through partnerships with universities with suitable accommodation. They can help with anything from arranging transfers, offering discounted meal plans, safeguarding children, and working with groups and individuals. They can also be a good solution for students looking for semi-temporary accommodation during work placements or internships. Some websites allow landlords to advertise their rooms, allowing you to contact them directly.
